Before Our Call

*A short guide to how I work, what to expect,
and how to get the most out of our conversation.*

Reading time: about four minutes

Prepared ahead of our first conversation

01 · WHY YOU'RE READING THIS

This isn't a sales presentation. Neither is our call.

Most first conversations with marketing providers are pitches. Ours won't be. The purpose of our call is to understand your business — how you attract customers today, what's working, what isn't, and what growth would actually look like for you.

By the end of the call, we'll both know whether I'm the right fit to help. If I am, I'll tell you exactly what I'd recommend and why. If I'm not, I'll tell you that too — honestly and directly.

*The more you know about how I think before we speak, the more useful our conversation will be —
and the more precisely I can shape a plan around your goals, your customers, and your brand.*

That's the only reason this document exists. It takes about four minutes to read, and it will make our call considerably more productive.

02 · WHO YOU'LL BE SPEAKING WITH

Ralph Nawfal

I built my experience working with Canadian businesses — helping them generate customers through websites, Google Ads, search optimization, and digital strategy in one of the most competitive markets in the world.

What I saw was simple: most Lebanese businesses don't have access to that level of system. Not because they can't afford it — but because it was never brought here properly. That's the gap I exist to close.

I deliberately work with a small number of clients at a time, alongside my teammate Ramy Al Housary. That means the person you speak with on the call is the same person doing the work — no account managers, no hand-offs, no departments.

ONE PRINCIPLE WORTH KNOWING

I don't sell websites. A website is a tool. Ads are a tool. My actual job is helping your business bring in more customers — or patients — and build assets that keep producing results long after the work is done.

Every recommendation I make connects back to this outcome.

03 · HOW THE CALL WORKS

Questions first. Recommendations second.

The call takes around 30 to 45 minutes. I'll ask about your business, your customers, your current marketing, your goals, and where things feel stuck.

I ask questions before recommending anything, because a recommendation made before understanding your business isn't a recommendation — it's a guess.

WHAT WE'LL COVER

◆ Your business

What you do, who you serve, and how customers find you today.

◆ What you've tried

Past marketing efforts — what worked, what didn't, and why.

◆ Your goals

What growth concretely means for you over the next twelve months.

◆ The honest fit

Whether I can genuinely help — assessed in both directions.

One thing to know: I don't work with everyone. I only take on businesses I'm confident I can help, because my reputation is built on results — not signed contracts. Part of this call is qualifying the opportunity honestly, on both sides.

04 · HOW TO PREPARE

Nothing formal. Three things to think about.

- 01 Where your customers currently come from.
- 02 What you've tried before — and what happened.
- 03 What growth would concretely mean for you in the next twelve months.

05 · WHAT HAPPENS AFTER THE CALL

If there's a fit, I'll send you a clear recommendation: what I'd do, why, what it costs, and what outcome to expect. No pressure and no follow-up chase. The decision will be yours — and it should feel obvious either way.

See you on the call.
